Teaching and Learning Approach

The teaching and learning approach is represented by a concept including three phases. During these phases it is more important to gain understanding of interdependencies and logical correlations than to just learn information by heart. In phase I the lecturer transfers relevant knowledge during the course itself. Students are asked to actively take part in the lectures e.g. by questions about course contents and discussions during the lessons. In phase II students deepen the acquired knowledge by exercises or case studies independently. The lecturer is present during this phase and is available for questions or further information. Results are presented by the students and discussed subsequently. This means that this course will provide basic knowledge but also cultivates individual understanding and practical knowledge transfer. Students broaden and deepen knowledge by literature related to the course.

Nevertheless, continuous participation and co-operation as well as accompanying self-studies are essential for learning success. At the same time the preparation effort for the final exam is reduced – respectively shared during the semester.

Active participation is the essential part of the teaching and learning approach. The lecturer will be available for questions as well as sparring partner for further discussion. Communication takes place by personal conversation and/or via email.
