Outline of the Course

This module provides students with an opportunity to explore digital marketing and consider how digital marketing works alongside more traditional marketing methods. Digital marketing in both business-to-consumer (B2C) and business-to-business (B2B) contexts are included. The module aims to explore concepts such as social media marketing, content marketing, influencer marketing, mobile marketing, virality and digital branding to create customer relationships. It will consider how digital channels have become an increasingly important way for organisations of all sizes to communicate with local and international consumers and business partners, to increase brand awareness and to promote engagement.

Additional material will be in the form of web-based reading and research, selected texts, journal articles and press articles. Independent research and study will be encouraged throughout to complement group work activities. Students will be exposed to case studies on a range of organisations.

Lectures slides will be made available on Moodle at least 24-hours before the lecture. Students can print them out in advance of the lecture and can then annotate notes during the lectures. Other information concerning the module, such as this Module Handbook and announcements will also be placed on Moodle.

Students should attend all lectures, seminars, and presentation sessions.

The lecture/seminar programme is subject to change.

Assessment

Attendance in the sessions is mandatory. Active participation is expected.

Assessment Strategy – How will this module be assessed?

There will be 1 assessment:

1. Group presentation (100%)

Further details about the assessment below:

- Assessment: Group presentation (in-person) in week 7
  - Duration/Size: 5 minutes per student
- Weighting: 100%
  - 50% - an individual mark for your part of the presentation
  - Each speaker has a maximum of 5 minutes for the presentation
  - 50% - a group mark for the presentation and how it fits together (everyone gets the same) and how the questions were answered
- One person to email the slides for the whole presentation to the module leader (in the corner of the slides write the name of the student and student ID presenting on each slide)

The topic of the group presentation is as follows:

Managing the customer experience has become a key task for many companies, with consumers' experiences of a company developed as a result of all their interactions with that company or its brands. These interactions might be with the company's marketing communications, its physical/online presence and staff.

Within your group choose a consumer-orientated company or brand. For this company/brand you should assess how it tries to manage its customers' experiences and compare how this relates to academic theory. In your collective view, how successful is this company at creating positive customer experiences? Your group should prepare a presentation of your findings.

Groups will be of 5-6 students and students are invited to form their own groups during the first two weeks of the semester. Any student who cannot find a group within the first two weeks will be allocated to one, although students are encouraged to form their own groups. Given that groups are self-selected, there is no opportunity for students to change group once they are in one. Students are requested to write the group members and case company name on an online sheet (e.g., Google sheets) that will be provided by the module leader.

Students are collectively responsible for facilitating contact/meetings with other group members and agreeing specific responsibilities for undertaking the assignment. Students are strongly advised to appoint a group leader and to keep a record of group meetings, actions and progress against these actions to ensure full participation by each member of the group.

Any instances of a malfunctioning group, e.g., non-engagement by an individual(s) within the group should be brought to the attention of the module leader by the group leader, within the specified timescales. This module operates the 'yellow card' and 'red card' system of penalties. The latest a 'yellow card' can be issued is Tuesday 27th October 2023; the latest a 'red card' can be issued is Tuesday 3rd November 2023 (a yellow card must be issued before a red card). The group leader should make the module leader aware of any problems with non-contribution as soon as possible to ensure that the appropriate action can be taken. For the avoidance of doubt, should a student receive a red card he/she will be required to deliver part of the presentation (5 minutes) alone and will receive a 10% deduction to his/her mark for both parts.

Submission deadlines and date of return of work to students: The presentations will take place in week 7 (November 11th, 2023). The presentations will take place in-person.

You need to inform the module leader once you have created the group and communicate the names of the team members.

One person to email the slides (at least 24h before the presentation) for the whole presentation to the module leader (in the corner of the slides write the name of the student and student ID presenting on each slide).

Coursework word limit: Duration/Size: 5 mins per student

Will feedback on draft coursework be given? Formative feedback can be provided.

Tips for achieving good marks in assessments: Guidance will be provided in the seminar 1. Additionally, students can ask questions during the weekly 90-minutes self-study sessions.

Feedback to students - How will I receive feedback on this module?

Each student will receive comments about their presentation. Students can request this feedback from the module leader. If after reading the written feedback, students require further feedback on their assignment they should email the module leader to make an appointment.
